WiFi Hotspot Maker is a lightweight wireless hotspot generator that allows you to create an ad hoc wireless network on your computer. You are required to configure the tool by providing it with an SSID and a security key, by hitting the Save button once you're done, and then you can use it to connect other devices to the Internet. Device Driver This tool can work as a WiFi adapter, since it relies on device drivers. Always update your drivers If you're working on an older device, you must always make sure that it is properly updated. Generate wireless hotspot automatically If you need to create a virtual wireless router automatically, you can turn to this tool and let it do the job for you. It does not rely on the Operating System for its operation, since it does not use the network manager and the built-in wireless adapter. In order to create an ad hoc hotspot, you are required to provide it with an SSID and a security key, which is done through the Settings tab.

Encryption You can pick to use WPA or WPA2 encryption when creating your hotspot.

Dependable application This application has a simple interface, thus making it easy to use and understand, yet it offers a bunch of features that some other tools do not have. As an example, you can use hotspot protection, thus preventing others from accessing your personal hotspot. Can be used on multiple devices

You can use this tool to create a virtual wireless router, which you can then use to connect other devices to the Internet. That way, you do not need to connect to another WiFi network to access the Internet. Automatic SSID You don't have to worry about the SSID, since it will be automatically generated.

Can connect to multiple networks
Like all WiFi Hotspot Maker, it can also connect to multiple networks, thus allowing you to connect to other networks as well.

Inexperienced users can install this tool The setup is fairly simple, so even users who are less experienced
