"Geo Soundtrack" presents the music of the game Geo, an adventure game (1 part story/2 parts puzzle) for the PC. The game is about a journey to the center of the Earth and a confrontation with the forces of nature. "Geo Soundtrack" is composed of different styles of music: - electronic: the game is based on the movement of sub-atomic particles, and most of the parts of the game feature continuous or repetitive music loops. - techno/dance: the game is a test of rhythm and time, with many areas featuring music loops and patterns. - experimental: there are multiple types of music here - some are based on percussion, some are ambient, some are lullabies and some are spine-chilling. The game includes 23 tracks in total. The parts are approximately 2.5 minutes each and each track, except for the last, is one piece of music - there are no multiple parts, no loops, no menu music. The sounds in Geo Soundtrack are extracted from the game Geo and were not created in this project. The music in Geo Soundtrack is also licensed under Creative Commons License CC Share-Alike 4.0 and is released under the licence "Share-Alike". You can use the tracks in any way you like, as long as you also make the same licence available. This allows you to use this audio in your own projects, remix it, translate it etc. The mix is primarily done in Cubase Studio and further worked on in a virtual live environment. During each stage of the project, I have worked on the mix day by day, so the file sizes of the tracks are a bit different on each version. The tracks were mixed live in Cubase Studio in 2016. I used an array of vintage hardware and software for this mix. I have used: - Mellotron M400 (2 layers + a second voice) - RME Fireface 800 (192.0k SPDI) - vintage Mellotron TU-125 (4 layers + an extra voice) - Archiver 65 w/ Studio One - Teclast SXM3 - AKAI APC4040 - Yamaha LS3 - Fostex FT8 I use Ableton Live to perform the mixing. This is the full track list: 1 - The

Awake is the first immersive interactive audio drama ever made – a virtual reality theatrical experience aimed at providing audiences with a profoundly emotional journey while listening to a drama-rich story. In the only edition of the inaugural season, the story takes place in a claustrophobic hotel room, where six people who are in various states of undress and semi-consciousness wake up to discover a fateful secret on this ominous October morning. Awake is a 360-degree, mixed reality hologram staged in the heart of a Manhattan skyscraper. Each of the team members of the cast will engage the audience through a series of dynamic, hologram-driven interactions like walkovers, 360° body translation, 360° body raising and lowering, and 360° head spinning. The player's interactions with the cast can have a powerful impact on the story, which may also be affected by the player's own actions and choices. There are just 6 episodes in the first season, with each story having a conclusion and tie-in cliffhanger at the end. On Steam, the season is being made available for sale for $12.99 (about £10.20 / $14.40) and includes the Season Pass which grants access to all subsequent Awake seasons, for $19.99 (about £14.40 / $21.60), or $29.99 (about £20.80 / $31.20) for both seasons, when purchased together. My Thoughts You have to experience this one for yourself, because it is a very unique experience. I want to say that it feels more like I was in a movie theater than I was at home watching television, not to put to down the quality of TV, but I enjoyed seeing how someone could make this happen. My biggest issue with this game was the voice over of the people, at times it seemed like they were talking to themselves, because there were such abrupt pauses between the character's mouths, so you just couldn't tell what they were saying. It sounded a bit pretentious, almost like they were modeling their voice overs to the highest standard of acting, for example, I thought that 'Holy' was playing the part of a woman, not God. It's hard to say anything about the story, so all I can say is that it's a beautiful experience and I can really recommend it. Season Pass I've never bought a season c9d1549cdd

"More Than A Game"Take the Shot! Pong. Ping Pong. Pool. Ping Pong. What else could you call it? Yes, it's Ping Pong, a game invented in the late 60s by a tech-savvy former math teacher named John August Adler. The idea was simple: two small paddles with a ball between them. The balls would bounce off the paddles and back to the other, and points were scored when the ball went through the goal. At an arcade bar in Campbell, California, Adler played this simple game against one of his friends. "[The friend] lost quite badly," Adler says. "And the guy took my paddle and left the game. And I said 'Wait a minute! I'm keeping the paddle.'" So the inventor Adler, ever inventive, began to think how to stop his opponent from taking the ball. What if the opponent's paddle had to bounce off a table or wall to get back to them? What if the wall got in the way? An idea for a new game was born. And the ping-pong table was born. Ping Pong revolutionized arcade games. Throughout the 60s and 70s, it was the most popular arcade game of its day. Hundreds of variations were released. It was the game of the World Games, the Olympic Games, and it was a favorite of politicians. The game was so popular, there was even a TV show. The Ping Pong Man was supposed to be the first celebrity to hit a table. "And the Ping Pong Man never hit a table," Adler says. The game's popularity even reached the White House. President Richard Nixon played it during a dinner to entertain prisoners from the United States embassy in Beijing. "Well, I hope you had a good time," Adler says, laughing. "I don't

Category: Uncategorized This is a collection of all wrong things from lots of sources. Many times I don't even know who wrote each thing but they have contributed to my life in so many strange and wonderful ways. I'm pulling for a perfect society but I'm not sure if that is worth fighting for. I'm happier now than I have ever been in my life and it's thanks to the internet and people on the internet. I honestly have a hard time imagining what the world would be like without the internet, facebook, and twitter. Finally, in my opinion, the way this world works is to some degree backwards and inferior to how it was. Recently, I have started to see anti-fatphobes. A man was walking down the sidewalk on Broad Street not too long ago. He was running to catch the bus. He didn't know he was being stopped by people. He wasn't running or on a mission to get somewhere. I was on the other side of the road. I thought he was cute. The first thing he did was say "hi." I asked him. Yes, he was fat. I told him his legs looked really thin. I didn't say he was fat. He did tell me he didn't feel happy like this. Well, you know, I don't either but sometimes society makes people feel bad about their looks and their body. Gasp. How tacky. Say what you want about me. Say I'm a maniac. You may say that I'm a walking contradiction. You may say that I hate people. I have friends. I used to think that fat people were disgusting. It was easier to look at them and be like "ugh! Don't even look at them!"

I was fat all the time. I hated my body. I hated being out in the sun. I was unhappy all the time. Luckily, I met Dr. Kiat-Puu and he helped my mental health in a big way and he fixed my metabolism in a better way. I looked at this man and thought he was fat too. I needed to talk to him. I was like, “Hey, man. Don’t let what other people say stop you from being happy.” I asked him if he knew there are overweight people who have it
