AVS Video Editor 6.1.1.269 (64bit) + Crack Key. You can also download the latest version of AVS Video Editor. AVS Video Editor 6.1.2.211 + Crack With AVS Video Editor AVS Video Editor. I need to somehow apply the awk variables to the file named "1" and "2". I was thinking of something like awk '{(file=="1")?print($1):print($2)}' "1". I can't seem to get it working though, any help would be greatly appreciated. The best approach I've found when dealing with output from multiple Unix tools is to redirect the output to a file which is then handed to your text processing tool. In this case, I'd use a bash script of the following form: #!/bin/bash while read -r f1 -r f2; do awk 'NR==1{print($1)} NR==2{print($2)}' "$f1" "$f2" > /dev/null; done && I've also updated the script above to handle file1.txt and file2.txt. It will emit three lines if both files are successfully processed. Of course, you can change this as required. 0
